

What is this study and what is it important?	What will participants have to do?	How do I sign up for the SPARK study?
Closing a research gap. British Asians diagnosed with cancer are not well represented in research studies. This study compares hospital-based recruitment strategies with recruitment to studies initiated by patient organisations.	Participants will be asked to complete three questionnaires and maybe take part in an interview. Involvement can be via post, remotely/online or face-to-face.	Check the inclusion criteria overleaf and, if you are eligible, email: steve@cancerequity.org.uk In the first instance we only require your name and preferred contact method, age range and confirmation you meet the study criteria. Then an academic researcher will contact you.

Who is conducting this study?

This study is being carried out by Kings College London in conjunction with the European Organisation for Research and Treatment of Cancer [EORTC]. Reference : <https://qol.eortc.org/projectqol/patient-organization-versus-hospital-based-recruitment-strategies-for-eortc-qlg-studies/>

Who is eligible for the SPARK study?

We are looking for British Asians who:

- are age 18 years and older at diagnosis
- have a confirmed or self-reported cancer diagnosis
- have evidence of cancer present or are between one- and five-years post-primary treatment or treatment for recurrence with curative intent.

The following people are excluded from the study:

- Anyone who has a cognitive impairment which presents an obstacle to the completion of questionnaires or an interview
- Anyone who does not or is unable to provide informed consent

Where can I find more information?

This study compares hospital-based recruitment strategies with recruitment to studies by patient organisations.

Click here or on the QR code for the SPARK study recruitment guide.

People may be supported by a relative, friend, health worker or carer in this process. Translated materials will be available for non-English speakers.